1003 Attica, Athens (c. 510-500 BC), silver tetradrachm, head of Athena r., in archaic style, full plume visible, rev. AΘE, owl stg. r., olive leaf to left, crescent to right, wt. 17.1gms. (HGC.4; Seltman Group H), very fine, rare £10,000-12,000

A very fine example of an early Athenian tetradrachm of superb archaic style. A well-centred strike, with the full plume of Athena's helmet visible.

This impressive archaic tetradrachm was issued a decade before the first Persian war. Athens provided the Ionian Greeks with assistance in their rebellion against the Persians, but aside from the sack of Sardes, the campaign was unsuccessful. Nonetheless, the Persian King Darius, aiming to punish Athens for their support of the Ionian rebellion, launched an invasion of Greece, landing at Marathon in 490 BC. Only twenty five miles from the city of Athens, the vastly outnumbered Athenian hoplite force crushed the invading Persian army, who turned and fled after suffering horrendous casualties. This silver tetradrachm is one of the earliest Athenian 'Owl' tetradrachms produced by the great city, and the coin would become a legend in the world of numismatics.

1004 Attica, Athens, tetradrachm (c. 500-480 BC), helmeted head of Athena r., wearing earring, rev. AΘE, owl standing right, head facing; above to left, olive-spray with berry, all within incuse square, wt. 16.61 gms. (Seltman grp. C (uncertain dies, perhaps A39/P41); Asyut grp. V; SNG Copenhagen 15), darkly toned, well centred, choice very fine, very rare £4000-4500

An attractive example of this early issue and of superb Archaic style.

Aelia Zenonis was empress for a short period of time during the reign of her husband Basiliscus, who was proclaimed emperor in 475 after a plot to depose Zeno. However, after a short term of just over a year, Basiliscus was evicted from the throne by a resurgent Zeno, who was supported by the senate and the wealth of the imperial treasury, which he had taken from Constantinople on his departure, forcing Basiliscus to raise taxes and fuel his own unpopularity with the people. A small collection of coins, medals, tokens and banknotes relating to Faversham

Faversham, located on the north coast of Kent is the oldest market town in the county dating back to pre-Roman times. Over 900 years ago it was mentioned in the Domesday Book. Whilst not one of the original historic Cinque Ports formed to furnish ships and men for the king's service, it was one of the lesser ports attached to them. For 400 years it was famous for oysters and the manufacture of gunpowder, but today, perhaps, it is better remembered as home to the country's oldest brewery, Shepherd Neame, founded in 1698.

1558 Faversham, King Stephen (1135-1154), a pair of silver counters from the reign of Charles I, struck in imitation of engraving, in the style of Simon de Passe, the King stands in full armour holding a battle-axe, STEPHANVS REX OBIT 25 OCTr 1154, rev. crowned shield with the sign for Sagittarius, RAINED 18 YEARS – BVRIED AT FEVERSHAM, 28mm. (MI.379/281), one fine, one better (2) £100-150

Stephen was buried in the grounds of the Abbey he and Queen Matilda had founded at Faversham in 1148. She and their son Eustace were to be buried alongside him. The graves were destroyed during the Dissolution of the Monasteries, the rumour being that their bones were thrown into Faversham Creek. However the Parish Church of St. Mary of Charity contains an un-named canopy tomb and it is thought they might rest there.

1559 Faversham, 17th snd 18th century tokens, halfpennies (2): Robert Hogben, three tuns (W.271); Robert Preston, THE QVEENS ARMES, 1664 (W.276); farthing, Francis Waterman (W.277), fine, very fine and fair; John Crow (1754-1822), brazier and coppersmith, halfpenny, 1794, old English 'Round Ship', PAYABLE AT FEVERSHAM around, rev. shield of arms of the Cinque Ports, CINQUE PORTS HALFPENNY. 1794, edge, PAYABLE AT IOHN CROWSS COPPER SMITH X . Prince Philip, as the Senior Fellow of the Royal Academy of Engineering, gave his name to this award medal which is 'awarded periodically to an engineer of any nationality who has made an exceptional contribution to engineering as a whole through practice, management or education.' The first of these medals was awarded in 1991 to Sir Frank Whittle and, including Professor Zienkiewicz, it has been awarded a further 17 times. The cataloguers believe this to be the first to be offered for sale on the open market. At a fraction under 16 ounces of pure gold it is a most generous award.

Olgierd 'Olek' Zienkiewicz was born in the United Kingdom though his early education was in Katowice, Poland. He was to devote much of his career to the 'finite element method' (FEM) of computer-aided engineering, using a computer-based method for the design and analysis of engineered systems, such as dams, automobiles, aircraft, medical and electronic devices. He published 'The Finite Element Method in Structural and Continuum' in 1967 and it was to be re-published in many editions. He continued to publish books and articles throughout his career.

Campden House was built for Sir Baptist Hicks c.1610 in the Jacobean style. The estate was purchased by Stephen Pitt in 1751 (or perhaps 1735) and towards the end of the 18th century the house was converted into a girls' boarding school. In March, 1862, Campden House was almost totally destroyed by fire. The Watts Collection contained two medals from the school. Earlier medals of the 1830s show the proprietor or Master to be a Mr. Lord (Grimshaw I, p. 28). There is an engraving of the school-room at Campden House, by Charles Richardson, that shows Mrs. Theed, the then headmistress, sitting with her pupils and teachers.

1753 Lifesaving, Lloyd's Medal for Saving Life at Sea, the large silver medal, 1839, by William Wyon, Leucothoe hovers above Ulysses, who clings to the mast of a sinking ship, and offers him her scarf, LEUCOTHOE NAUFRAGO SUCCURRIT, rev. OB CIVES SERVATOS within wreath, PRESENTED BY LLOYD'S around, 73mm. (Eimer 1333; Jones, Art of the Medal, 287; MH.1919, 853; Payne 314/1), lightly buffed but extremely fine and extremely rare £500-700

Whilst the medal is dated to 1839, the award was sanctioned in 1836.

1754 Archaeology: Lt. General Augustus Henry Lane-Fox Pitt Rivers (1827-1900), copper medal, c. 1880-1884, by Messrs. John Pinches, surveyor's scope, archaeologist's pick, skull, axe head and in ex., sword blade, rev. OPENED BY A. PITT RIVERS F.R.S., 38mm. (BHM.3079; Eimer 1677; Pinches [1989] p. 33), extremely fine and rare £100-150

The purpose of the medal is not known. In 1880 Pitt Rivers inherited an estate that included the whole area around Cranbourne Chase. It has been suggested the medal commemorates his excavations there and that specimens were left at the site. Alternatively, it could simply commemorate the opening of the Pitt Rivers Museum in Oxford in 1884.
